

Editor Note

Happy New Year

Hopefully, the year that will soon pass will leave a good impression on us. Meanwhile, next year we will make more noteworthy progress.

Our journal, "The Journal of Indonesian Development Planning" (JPP) has shown quite satisfactory performance so far, as shown by its timely presence and bring enough papers with a quality that is acceptable to many groups. We on the editorial board are also quite satisfied with this performance.

However, JPP has been operating with various limitations, which have become more pronounced recently. One of them is regarding journal management staff who are increasingly senior, but it is not easy to find replacements from the younger generation. Jobs in the field of research and development journals like this seem to be getting less and less interest, while recently in government and education circles in Indonesia, writing journal articles is no longer a high priority.

Maintaining JPP or improving it is a challenge that the JPP management will answer in the future. Hopefully, we can oversee it well.

In this edition there are seven papers, which, as usual, vary quite widely. Hopefully, readers can read these papers carefully.
